Mr. Bot

Algo trading (algorithmic trading) uses computer programs with predefined rules (based on price, time, volume, etc.) to automatically execute trades at high speeds, removing human emotion and bias for faster, more precise, and efficient trading in financial markets like stocks, crypto, and forex. It involves coding strategies, back testing them on historical data, and then deploying them via broker APIs for automatic order placement, benefiting both institutions and retail traders by leveraging computational power for better market liquidity and execution.
